

June 1853
I have a very hard piece of work in every respect to getting down to the bottom of the matter & to writing down the whole of it in a way that will be understood by the people at large. I have a great deal to do in the way of writing & I have a great deal to do in the way of reading. I have a great deal to do in the way of thinking & I have a great deal to do in the way of feeling. I have a great deal to do in the way of acting & I have a great deal to do in the way of suffering. I have a great deal to do in the way of dying & I have a great deal to do in the way of being born.

myself to be pulled by them, & in general, without more or less saying that 439
the world would have accepted it. This is indeed a curious thing in the world returned for them; they accept from us heaps of manufactures, & natural libels are offered, with returns presents, which since the King's death have never amounted to even 1/20, unless it is a small present, & yet sometimes they will be dragged to it before they accept.
I was agreeably surprised after this return by seeing a painter from the Mississippi arrive to put on some blue stripes on my book delves & window frames. I imagine that light this to a missionary, who had for 2-3 years to sit before a square hole cut out as window in a small back-room which had served as meditation-black hole for bonges. I had then for an equal number of years yearly to paste it over with paper to hide the many exercises of the walls & make them appear white. Now, the two sides of my study mostly exposed to wind & weather, & where the rain repeatedly destroyed the neatest bookbinding with which I had endeavored to paste my walls into lightness & beauty, have received one more coating of boards from within, & this by the kindness of the "Mississippi" towards me has been embellished with 2 coats of white paint, on which now the blue stripes were to be embroidered, & in addition to all this I have now two rows of boards, three by two feet. What an agreeable change! light on one side of our house in stormy weather, when it in all other, is also an incalculable comfort. May be rendered more grateful to the giver of all good.
Capt. Lee comes with orders from the Commodore, that I should write to the mandarins, & adding as a present the cattle that remained behind, acquaint them, that he wished to obtain two horses.
Told Capt. Lee of the difficulties of his morning & that I therefore thought it unadvisable if he wished he should be present. we both saw it necessary to report to the Commodore first. Praying the Mississippi Capt. Lee kindly invited me to dinner with him. was then sent over to the Susquehanna. The Commodore kindly agreed to my proposal to let the maker risk for the present.
The Commodore kindly invited me to preach to-morrow on board the Flagship, & told me, he had sent his Chaplain, Mr. Pringle, to give me a formal invitation on his part. But on informing the Commodore of my engagement at the Plymouth he made stopped. "Next time," said the Commodore, giving me thereby at once a good hint, that he meant soon to be back from Japan. - Accompanied the Commodore, who had conceived a walk at "Si-Dumai" with private friends, who deservedly stand much in his favour. On our return to the residence of Messrs. Brown & Cooper we gave the Telegraph a trial, and sent several messages to & from the upper & lower temple, separated from each other about one hundred yards' distance.

The vast number of boats on our return that I would have had difficulty in returning home had not the Commodore kindly invited me into his own boat & banded me while steering himself. This was a rare ride indeed. *

25. Monday. To last was the kind night I slept unexpectably almost quite sleepily, notwithstanding my fatiguing bodily labours & the long walk & ride I had had yesterday, no mean proof how irritated & overworked my mind is, if strong bodily fatigue can neither succeed in bringing it to rest.

I studied my sermon over from the tent: Ron has prepared a table before me in the presence of mine enemies. "^{announced very early} Mr. Pillsbury's note of yesterday, ^{polite} Ichiwarashi & Se-ku come on official message (the humble underhand work) that the mandarins accept of him to be Evangelist, & that I was to inform the Commodore. From good reasons I persuaded Ichiwarashi to inform me that I thought it becoming the occasion, themselves on our message, & we concerted, that unless they could be at my house before I left for the Plymouth, they should spend per hour sleep proceed to the Sushuhanna, where I should join them on my way back from the Plymouth. - was received very devoutly on board the Plymouth, but was given to understand - as is usual the case on men of war - that the service must be short, which induced the more warmly to pray

* On coming home found the following etc: U.S.F. Sushuhanna, June 25th 1853. My esteemed friend, will you please have the goodness to conduct the religious services on board the Sushuhanna to-morrow? I will come in a boat to-morrow morning & hope you will be ready a little before 10 o'clock. Please accept present my kindest regards to Mrs. P. I accept for yourself other more best wishes. Yours Truly Edw. C. Pillsbury.

I still am in hopes to be able to get some native manufactured articles for your collection. I have the honor to

 The job of getting off the cable & ladder went to day very smooth.
 only that Mitchell & Co. were somewhat too hastily ordered off, which might almost have retarded the transaction had it not been too much advanced already, for one of the screws put on was that unless the cable be soon removed the men might be kept here, who know, how long to watch it. The Commodore having kindly left me the choice of three sheep, I had made up a bamboo enclosure for Mrs. Kelly, a Cape of Good Hope flock, quite the pet of the missis, her mate, & a China ewe with young.

Mr. Spieden comes with the following note from the Commodore
 Dear Sir
 I thank you for the meteorological tables which shall be returned after some notes are taken from it. I also thank you for the reptiles which had been under the impression that reptiles, or snakes were unknown in the island.

with you have the goodness to order the of this ship to send me off to morning morning I shall be glad to see you on board with the August to -morrow. Boats will be at at Funai
 at 3 o'clock P.M.

 Mr. Spieden had beside a message to say I should mention what, or the amount I wished to for my trouble about the Squadron, the Commodore being sure his Government would incline richly to reward me. I said, I trust entirely to the Commodore's kind & generous feelings towards us, for which I am greatly obliged.
