recents me of George, but the government to pass upon me is bound to submit to his opinion, because it would be George to oppose it. In the same contract of Dr. Johnson George in reference to some family, he writes: "I have been a stranger to real enjoyment ever since I came here. I have my happiness in the reciprocal return of friendship & esteem

4. One of the great boasts of Compeianism is that it encompasses the whole circle of life, not only from birth but even from conception to & beyond, i.e. while in the grave. If a work were done for the mere saying these it was to begin & when to end, then Compeianism would indeed deserve praise, as much as if an engineer could create a railway across three continents by mere by sketching a line on paper commencing at London & finishing at Cal cutta. A man accustomed to practical notions & sound thought then con templating Compeianism as a whole scarcely knows what to be amazed at the boldness of the plan or at the emptiness of the details. I remember men of those ages past rise before him with assertions of practical achieve ments, which the whole christian world together with the enlightenment of of Greece & Rome have as yet failed to realize, & when you ask them as to the mode of effecting all their boasts, they answer you with pueri lities, self-satisfied by the gross ignorance they display. Thus reading to day in the lives of the rulers which, for the safe development of the fetus in the womb, not only bodily but even mentally, the mother is enjoined to observe, it is manifest all are proceeding on the supposition, that if the woman keeps her body in a straight line, the body & mind of the child will be neatly shaped. Can there be a greater possibility than this? The woman is forbidden to lie on her side, to stand on one leg, to sit on an unequal mat &c. and, of course, I asked my friends, the same rules would apply still more stringently while the child is born? Of course so, was their answer.
I gave them a small sketch of our obstetrical rules, for the most of which I referred them to books of post & part, which they are in the habit of consulting with their own eyes much rather than the birth of a human child, & from the various turns round their own axis, I proved that the diameters of the pelvis are not the same, & that a side position will therefore secure a better transit through the longest diameter than a back position. They could not resist the evidence of the ignorance of their own cases, & assured me - what I readily believed - that very many women in London died in child birth, undoubtedly owing to the gross ignorance of midwives, coupled with the ignorance

Exhausted in mind as well as body - I am thankful for several prayerbooks we have to assist our languid family devotions. In writing his morning prayer, including among its petitions of praise & refreshing as with "eternal sleep" - I confess I found it greatly discordant with my personal state. But what for that? How many times may I during my ministry have uttered such discordances with the feelings & the individual condition of many in my audience. When then is the boasted advantage, on his head, of stamping prayer over a written formula. Now will either written or extempore prayers fit all persons present. An unalloyed unanimous choir is impossible only in heaven.

7. Two of our young ladies have twice absented themselves under plea of duty, so that the third is the only one to come alone & late too. I greatly suspect it was the illness of the one who came, who manoeuvred to get the other two rejected ill. For during both solitary visits he confidentially entrusted me with his case, nothing less than an old standing venereal disorder, contracted, he says, by contact in a house of friends who had imported it from China. Once more I had full opportunity of convincing myself of the circumstances of married Leodrovans. In return for the secrecy my patient
- quite needlessly - craved from me he offered to answer any questions I might ask on Leodrovan matters. I thought it most fitting to inquire concerning the marriage, Japanese residency here, and was told, they would consider it as his grace to send their daughter into a foreign house, and not even between inhabitants of different villages in Leodrovan nor marriages contracted. They marry each other rather villages, and marriages therefore are entered here by the Japanese as clandestine, & so to say, forced, though they are well known to exist in many places, continued, as the Dutch do in Japan, with marrying but keeping women. He also said they had numerous women of this kind in Leodrovan, especially those who came from the islands, as the Rivasas, who prefer to take
