SIGNING OF THE OKINAWAN AID AGREEMENT IN TOKYO

In ceremonies held in Tokyo at 10:30 a.m., April 25, 1964 (Tokyo time), the United States and Japan concluded an agreement to establish a Consultative Committee and a Technical Committee to facilitate cooperation between the two governments in programs of economic and technical assistance in the Ryukyu Islands. The new agreement was concluded in accordance with the policy announced by the late President Kennedy on March 19, 1962, calling for a cooperative relationship between the United States and Japan in programs of assistance to the Ryukyuan people.

The first meeting of the Consultative Committee was held immediately after the signing of the exchange of notes between the two governments. It is expected that the Technical Committee, with a representative of the U.S. High Commissioner of the Ryukyu Islands serving as chairman and with participation by representatives of the Governments of Japan and the Ryukyu Islands, will commence its functions in connection with carrying out the agreement in the near future.
