Statement by Director General Mori
on the United States Proposals on the Japanese Government's Economic Assistance for JFY 1967 and on the GOJ assistance for disaster rehabilitation

I would like to thank you for the very excellent presentations of the United States proposals on the Japanese Government's Economic Assistance for JFY 1967 as well as on the special assistance for disaster rehabilitation. You may recall that when I discussed various problems with the former High Commissioner, General Watson in my first visit to Okinawa, I laid particular emphasis on the need for acceleration of development of Okinawa. I am happy to note that the proposals now presented by the United States seem to meet the requirements for acceleration of Okinawan development.

Typhoons of unprecedented felocity have struck Okinawa this year. With the added burden of rehabilitation works from the typhoon damages works to be accomplished in Okinawa are truly tremendous and really challenging. With this background in mind we will study your proposals, and we will prepare our counterproposals in consultation with the agencies concerned and will submit them for your consideration at an early date.

Thank you very much.

Remarks by Director General Mori at the Tenth Meeting of the US-Japan
Consultative Committee

I have already had the pleasure of meeting with all of you present here at this meeting on one occasion or another, but as this is the first time that I attend a meeting of the US-Japan Consultative Committee on Okinawa as a committee member, I would like to say a few words, in the hope that I will enjoy the same cooperative and friendly relations with you as Mr. Yasui, the former Director General of the Prime Minister's Office, did.

Prior to the current meeting, already nine meetings of this Committee have been held since it was established in April, 1964. I highly admire that this committee has made great contribution in the field of economic assistance to Okinawa as well as in the settlement of various issues concerning Okinawa. I, as a new comer, should like to pay my respect to all who have been concerned with the work of the Committee.

It is needless to say that the US military installations in Okinawa play an important role in the security of the Far East, but at the same time we cannot ignore the fact that 940,000 Okinawans have been placed under US administration separated from Japan proper for 21 years, keeping always in their heart strong desires for return of Okinawa to Japanese administration.

administration. Accordingly, how to harmonize the requirement for maintenance of military installations and the national aspirations for return of Okinawa to Japanese administration is the heart of the Okinawa problem and should be a basis for any policy toward Okinawa of the [redacted] governments of the United States and Japan.

I believe, if we continue to share between Japan and the United States a common view on the heart of the Okinawa problem, it would not be difficult for both countries to agree, in the light of their respective national interests, on a common policy toward Okinawa based on such a common view. This also reflects my firm conviction that the settlement of the problem of Okinawa could be expected only through the mutual understanding based on the friendship and close cooperation between Japan and the United States. I believe also that in order to continue to have a common view and promote mutual understanding, there should be frank exchange of views on various issues concerning Okinawa at every possible opportunity. In this connection I am looking forward particularly to the cooperation and understanding of everyone concerned with this committee.

In closing I should like to ask you to convey my high respects to General Watson, former High Commissioner of the Ryukyu Islands who returned to the United States after excellent accomplishment of his 26-month duty, and would like to add that the Japanese people including people of Okinawa are looking forward with great expectations to the arrival of the new High Commissioner, General Unger.

Thank you very much.

Therefore, I believe that it is the core of the Okinawa problem to harmonize the requirements for maintenance of military installations and the national aspirations for return of Okinawa to Japanese administration. And this should be the basis on which to be formed any policy toward Okinawa of the governments of the United States and Japan.

I believe, that if we continue to share between Japan and the United States a common view on the heart of the Okinawa problem, it will not be difficult for both countries to agree, in the light of their respective national interests, on a common policy toward Okinawa based on such a common view. Statement by Director-General Mori
On the Question of the Flags to be Flown on Ryukyuan Vessels

We have just heard from the U.S. side that this matter requires further review and study on the part of the United States Government, and I should like to say a few words on our request concerning this matter: Of course we understand that there are difficulties arising out of legal considerations or related to international practices concerning the vessel flag problem. However, this problem has arisen from the national feeling of Okinawan people as Japanese nationals which transcends the logic.

I should like again to request the U.S. side to try to overcome legal or other difficulties, taking the background of the problem into full consideration and to accept the Japanese proposal concerning the change of the design of the Okinawan vessel flag at an early date.

Thank you very much.
