Handwritten Japanese text in vertical columns, likely a manuscript or historical document. The text is written in a cursive style (sōsho) and is arranged in approximately 12 columns from right to left. The characters are dark and somewhat faded, with some ink bleed-through visible from the reverse side of the paper. The text appears to be a formal record or a personal letter, given the use of honorifics and specific terminology. The columns are separated by vertical lines, possibly indicating different sections or entries. The overall appearance is that of an aged, well-used document.

Handwritten Japanese text in cursive style (sōsho), arranged in vertical columns. The text is highly stylized and difficult to decipher. The columns are separated by a central vertical crease, suggesting the book is open. The ink is dark on a light background.

Handwritten Japanese text in cursive (sōsho) style, arranged in vertical columns. The text is dense and appears to be a formal document or letter. The characters are dark and contrast sharply with the light background. The writing is organized into several columns, with some characters appearing larger and more prominent than others, possibly indicating a title or key points. The overall appearance is that of a traditional Japanese manuscript.
