1. The first part of the book is devoted to a general history of the subject.

It begins with a description of the various forms of the disease.

and then proceeds to a detailed account of the symptoms and signs.

The author then discusses the various theories which have been advanced.

and finally comes to the conclusion that the disease is caused by a specific micro-organism.

This conclusion is supported by the following facts:

1. The disease is always accompanied by a high temperature.

2. The patient is always found to be very ill.

3. The disease is always fatal.

4. The disease is always accompanied by a profuse sweating.

5. The disease is always accompanied by a rapid pulse.

6. The disease is always accompanied by a high mortality.
